JAMES C. O’BRIEN
Albright Stonebridge Group, former US Special Envoy for the Balkans

U.S. AND EUROPEAN COOPERATION IN A WIDER EUROPE
AVOIDING THE “TURKEY GAME” IN THE WESTERN BALKANS

James C. O’Brien, a Principal of Albright Stonebridge Group and head of the firm’s Europe Practice, draws on over twenty-years of high-level experience working with international businesses, governments and nongovernmental organizations. During the Clinton Administration, Mr. O’Brien served as a special presidential envoy for the Balkans, Senior Adviser to the Secretary of State, and Principal Deputy Director of Policy Planning at the Department of State. He was responsible for US diplomatic, economic, and security policy in southeastern Europe and charged with post-conflict planning and ensuring that the Department’s priorities and its $23 billion budget were aligned. During his tenure at the State Department, he participated in high-profile international negotiations including: leading deliberations during the Dayton Agreement, which ended the Bosnian conflict; guiding U.S. support for the International Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia; and finalizing agreements to control weapons of mass destruction in the former Soviet Union.

Discussants:
Ivan Krastev, Chair, Center for Liberal Strategies, Sofia
Wolfgang Petritsch, former High Representative for Bosnia and Herzegovina, Ambassador of Austria to the OECD
